

How Much More?
by Brit

How much more can a heart withstand as home is torn away A father's voice is silenced, stilled years amassed within one day

How much more can a heart withstand as illusions are broken and torn By the madness of one man's rage bitterness is born

How much more can a heart withstand
as love is unjustly slain False revenge steals tender love bartering hope for searing pain

How much more can a heart withstand
as bond is hidden from sight Desperation drives the heart to hunt and compels the soul to fight

How much more can a heart withstand
as right has lost its way Dreams have died in a broken heart that's forgotten how to pray

How much more can a heart withstand anger silences what is heard Promises meant as eternal bonds are lost with bitter words

How much more can a heart withstand voracity exacts its due May the bond yet keep the hope alive until his life is through