

My Partner's Eyes
A Poem from Sweet Revenge
by Brit

My partner's eyes are azure like storm clouds heavy with rain I see the tortured soul inside haunted by unanswered pain.

My partner's eyes are twilight gentled by his smile
The shadow to my sunlight entwined by countless miles.

My partner's eyes are seascape changing with the light Dancing with a child's mirth my tired heart takes flight.

My partner's eyes are daybreak forgiving my selfish soul
A glance that heals my brokenness restoring what pride has stole.

My partner's eyes are cerulean fear and anger take their toll Threatening like a storm-tossed sea mirroring the billow's roll.

My partner's eyes are closed now shut tight against suffering's rain I'll stand as guardian 'til healing comes and I bring him home again.