

Words
by Brit

I don't need words to realize how much I mean to you There's nothing on this grieving earth that love can't bear us through.

I don't need words to hear or know your soul's call to my heart Together we construct a whole alone, a fractured part.

I don't need words to feel or sense the love you have for me Partner, brother, confidante by fortune and destiny.

I don't need words to discern or grasp your mind, your sense, your thoughts A glance, a nod, a trace, a smile bitter lessons life has taught.

I don't need words to restore or atone when the world demands it's due I only need the healing that comes from knowing you.
