Musings from "Starsky's Lady"
by Brit

Yesterday you swept into my life
Held me captive with a touch
Yesterday my heart stirred
Never cherished as dear or much

Yesterday I held you to me
And trusted you with my soul
Yesterday I dreamed of forever
And didn't fear of growing old

Yesterday you kissed me
With a longing I felt deep inside
Yesterday I loved you
With nothing left to hide

Yesterday hope was destroyed
And the sun fell from the sky
Yesterday you comforted me
And then you said goodbye

Yesterday I knew how to breathe
Yesterday I cared
Yesterday I would have died
Except the burden then was shared.
